Student stabbed, another arrested in Cambridge

A Cambridge Rindge & Latin School student was stabbed allegedly by a classmate during a fight at the school Tuesday morning.

Cambridge police were called to the high school about 8:45 a.m. when two girls became involved in a fight that resulted in one of them being stabbed in the shoulder.

The student was taken to a local hospital for a minor injury.

Police arrested the other student, Jasmine Genty, 19, of Cambridge, and recovered a knife. METRO

Gambling

Lottery plans $30 scratch ticket

The Massachusetts Lottery next month will launch a $30 instant ticket — the highest priced ticket in the agency's history — with a top prize of $15 million.

Known as "World Class Millions," the game's top prize will be the highest scratch-and-win payout ever offered by the agency, officials said at a meeting Tuesday.

Overall, the game will pay out more than $600 million in cash prizes. Ticket sales will begin at the end of April.

Massachusetts will become the 14th state to offer a $30 instant ticket. SHNS

Death investigation

Suspects sought in killing of Waltham teen

Authorities were seeking the public's help locating two men who they said were involved in the fatal shooting of Tyler Zanco, 17, of Waltham.

Arrest warrants were issued for Domingo Mendes, 22, of Belmont and Taylor Poulin, 21, of Newton, the Middlesex district attorney's office said on Tuesday. METRO

Agent at risk when he killed Todashev

Investigation. Documents released by a Florida prosecutor on Tuesday reveal new details of the fatal shooting of Tamerlan Tsarnaev's friend.

Holding a broomstick-type pole in his hand like a javelin and moving toward a state police trooper, Ibragim Todashev was shot three to four times by an agent for the FBI who then shot him multiple times again when he allegedly lunged at officers, according to a prosecutor's report released Tuesday.

Todashev was being questioned by Massachusetts State Police troopers and the agent about his involvement in a 2011 triple murder in Waltham.

He allegedly was about to sign a document implicating himself when he suddenly flung a coffee table in the air, striking the FBI agent in the head. He then ran toward the kitchen and raised a pole above his head, the report says.

"As Mr. Todashev advanced on the MSP officer, the Special Agent of the FBI fired three to four shots at him," the report said. "Mr. Todashev dropped to his knees by the force of the shots, but was not incapacitated. He immediately sprung toward the officers in what the MSP officer describes as a low-angled lunge. The Special Agent of the FBI fired three to four additional shots, which incapacitated Mr. Todashev and resulted in his death."

The report by Orange-Osceola State Attorney Jeff Ashton concludes that the FBI agent who fatally shot Todashev should not face charges for the shooting.

The report comes after a months-long investigation into the shooting death of Todashev, a Chechan immigrant who knew accused Boston Marathon bomber Tamerlan Tsarnaev.

He was fatally shot in his Orlando apartment last May during the nearly five-hour-long interrogation with authorities.

An autopsy report included in the release of documents concludes that Todashev was shot a total of seven times.

Questions lingered for months about exactly what led to the shooting and about the interview and whether authorities were there to question Todashev about the bombings or a 2011 triple homicide in Waltham.

A state trooper said in an interview with authorities that Todashev indicated the Waltham murders were "just gonna be a robbery."

Department of Justice

Additional report clears FBI agent

Also released on Tuesday was another report examining the fatal shooting of Ibragim Todashev.

This report, by the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Justice, also cleared the FBI agent who fatally shot Todashev.

That report recounted much of the same information discussed in the Florida prosecutor's report and outlined investigators' reasons to not seek charges against the agent.

"After reviewing all available evidence, the Civil Rights Division and the USAO have concluded that the evidence does not reveal a violation of federal criminal civil rights statutes or warrant further federal criminal investigation," authorities wrote in the report.

Quoted

"There was no doubt in my mind that Todashev intended to kill both of us."

Guilty plea. Attorney admits to drug smuggling

An attorney from Quincy pleaded guilty on Tuesday to smuggling drugs into a courthouse last year in an attempt to get them to an inmate.

Michael Lustig, 45, pleaded guilty to attempting to distribute drugs, according to the Suffolk district attorney's office. He was sentenced to a probationary term of 18 months during which he will have to undergo drug and alcohol treatment, testing and counseling.

Authorities said detectives received information that Lustig intended to deliver drugs to a Chelsea District Court inmate who was not his client. They received a court order to search him and did so when he tried to bypass court security using his identification when he said he was there to see "a friend," authorities said.

Inside an envelope with the inmate's name were Suboxone tablets, authorities said. Before being opened, the envelope was given to the judge who issued the order so as not to violate any potential attorney-client privilege. MICHAEL NAUGHTON

Hubway bike share to make return next week

Hubway bikes are getting fixed up and ready to go for the season. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

Relaunch. More than 100 bicycle-sharing stations are expected to be ready on April 2.

It's almost time to break out your bicycle helmet.

Hubway, the Boston area's bike sharing system, is set to return to Boston, Brookline and Somerville city streets next week. The system announced on its website Monday that most bike stations will be operational on April 2.

Stations have been reinstalled in recent weeks, and the bikes aren't far behind.

"The Hubway team has been hard at work deploying stations, and nearly 100 stations (out of 140) are expected to be operational by April 2, with most remaining stations to be rolled out in early April," Hubway said in a system alert.

Because of the Boston Marathon, stations along Boylston Street in Brookline and Boston will not be installed until after the April 21 race.

Last year, Hubway announced that it would test a pilot program in Cambridge. Most stations operated throughout the winter to test year-round feasibility.

Cost increase

Officials outline plans for MBTA fare hike

MBTA fares will increase by between 4 and 7 percent on nearly all service options, rising 10 cents for bus and subway rides, according to a plan detailed on Tuesday that state officials will present to the public.

A fare hike is on the horizon.
NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

The average 5 percent fare increase would go into effect July 1, generating $20 million to $24.5 million in new revenue and helping the Transportation Department meet the new requirement for generating a larger portion of its own revenue — which was part of the 2013 law raising gas and tobacco taxes.

Students and people with disabilities will receive some breaks. Fares for The Ride, door-to-door paratransit service, will stay steady, while the MBTA will offer a seven-day student pass for $26, a $2 discount from the current cost of a seven-day pass. The T will also offer a five-day student pass for the same price, which is a $1 increase.

A public comment period will be held before a plan is finalized. SHNS

Four Loko to pay $400K as part of settlement

The company that makes the controversial alcoholic beverage Four Loko agreed to a multi-state settlement over allegations of deceptive marketing practices and will pay $400,000, it was announced on Tuesday.

Massachusetts was one of 19 states, as well as the city of San Francisco, that took part in the settlement with Phusion Products, LLC, according to Massachusetts Attorney General Martha Coakley's office.

The attorneys general of those states accused Phusion of unlawfully marketing the flavored malt beverage, as well as promoting the misuse of alcohol by underage consumers and failing to disclose the effects of drinking alcoholic beverages combined with caffeine. METRO

Chinese families clash with the police

Ire. Malaysia's response has enraged relatives of the 150-plus Chinese passengers.

Dozens of angry relatives of passengers on a lost Malaysian jetliner clashed with police in Beijing on Tuesday, accusing the Southeast Asian country of "delays and deception" a day after it confirmed the plane crashed in remote seas off Australia.

The relatives' grief and anger were unleashed on Monday night after Malaysian Prime Minister Najib Razak announced that Flight MH370 had crashed in the southern Indian Ocean.

Citing satellite-data analysis by British firm Inmarsat, he said there was now no doubt that the Boeing jet came down in the ocean in one of the most remote places on Earth — an implicit admission that all 239 people on board died. REUTERS

Ukraine crisis

West, Russia draw line

Russia and the West drew a tentative line under the Ukraine crisis on Tuesday after President Barack Obama and his allies agreed to hold off on more damaging economic sanctions unless Moscow goes beyond the seizure of Crimea.

Describing Russia as a "regional power" and not the biggest national security threat to the United States, Obama said Russian forces would not be removed militarily from Crimea, but the annexation of the Black Sea region was not a "done deal" because the international community would not recognize it. US, Russia agree on nuclear threat World leaders called on countries Tuesday to cut their use and their stocks of highly enriched nuclear fuel to the minimum to help prevent al-Qaida-style militants from obtaining material for atomic bombs.

But they also underlined that many challenges remained and stressed the need for increased international cooperation to make sure highly enriched uranium, plutonium and other radioactive substances do not fall into the wrong hands.

The United States and Russia set aside their differences to endorse the meeting's final statement aimed at enhancing nuclear security around the world. REUTERS

Snooping. Obama says the US needs to win back trust after NSA spying revealed

Obama made some decisions aboutchanges to the NSA programs in January. / GETTY IMAGES

President Barack Obama said on Tuesday that U.S. intelligence agencies were not snooping on ordinary citizens, but admitted it would take time to win back the trust of European governments and people after revelations of extensive U.S. surveillance.

Former intelligence contractor Edward Snowden's disclosures about the sweep of the National Security Agency's monitoring activities triggered a national debate over privacy rights but also damaged relations with some European governments.

Obama said one of the aims of his trip to Europe this week was to reassure allies that he was acting to meet their concerns by limiting the scope of data-gathering.

"I am confident that everybody in our intelligence agencies operates in the best of intentions and is not snooping into the privacy of ordinary Dutch, German, French or American citizens," Obama said after a nuclear security summit.

However, Obama said he recognized that "because of these revelations, there is a process that is taking place where we have to win back the trust, not just of governments, but more importantly of ordinary citizens, and that is not going to happen overnight." REUTERS

"There is a danger because of these new technologies that at some point it could be abused, and that is why I initiated a broad-based review."

US top court signals support for corporate religious claims

The U.S. Supreme Court appeared poised on Tuesday to open the door to companies' religious-based objections to government regulations as justices weighed whether business owners can object to part of President Barack Obama's health care law.

Ruling: Severance pay is taxable

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled on Tuesday that taxes are due for Social Security and Medicare on severance packages paid to workers who are laid off involuntarily, overturning a lower court ruling that could have led to a wave of payroll tax refund requests from U.S. businesses.

The court voted 8-0 that Quality Stores Inc., a defunct retailer, and its employees are not entitled to tax refunds totaling about $1 million. REUTERS

‘Scandal’ star and Judge Joe Brown are fighting the law

Today in “Men Behaving Badly,” we have “gladiator” Columbus Short and Judge Joe Brown getting in all sorts of trouble.

First up: Short, who portrays the dapperly dressed Harrison Wright on “Scandal,” seems to have gotten into a wee bar fight on March 15 in Los Angeles, according to TMZ.com. The fight went the way most bar fights do — words were exchanged, egos were harmed — and then Short punched a guy, breaking his nose and rendering him unconscious. Cops are currently investigating.

This isn’t the first time Short has gotten in trouble using his fists. TMZ.com reports he punched a fellow gymgoer in the face after an altercation in 2010, knocking several teeth out. Gladiator, indeed.

Meanwhile, TV’s Judge Joe Brown, who should really know better, was sentenced to a five-day jail stay on a contempt of court charge issued by a Tennessee judge Monday, according to a court spokesman. Brown, who was representing a client, became “pretty raucous” and “challenged the authority” of Magistrate Harold Horne, another judge told CNN. After that, the world’s best mug shot, above, was taken.

Paltrow and Martin separating

After more than 10 years of marriage, Gwyneth Paltrow and Chris Martin are calling it quits.

Paltrow announced on her website, Goop, that the two have decided on a “conscious uncoupling.” The site crashed when we visited, but we took a screenshot like the investigative journalists we are.

The couple wrote in their statement:

“It is with hearts full of sadness that we have decided to separate. We have been working hard for well over a year, some of it together, some of it separated, to see what might have been possible between us, and we have come to the conclusion that while we love each other very much we will remain separate. We are, however, and always will be a family, and in many ways we are closer than we have ever been. We are parents first and foremost, to two incredibly wonderful children and we ask for their and our space and privacy to be respected at this difficult time. We have always conducted our relationship privately, and we hope that as we consciously uncouple and coparent, we will be able to continue in the same manner.

Love,
Gwyneth & Chris”

From cramped to crafted

Furnishings. Adam Rogers of Thos. Moser talks about the lost art of simple design as part of Boston Design Week.

Back Bay's Thos. Moser will put its own mark on Boston Design Week with a free event. / ERIC ROTH

Handily, Boston Design Week coincides with the time of year when many people move into new homes or, after a shut-in winter, ache to re-imagine their living space. One event, Crafting an Environment, at New England-founded furniture maker Thos. Moser's Boston showroom, offers a look into some of the basic tenets of design via a panel discussion featuring several Boston-based designers. Note that title, though: crafting — not creating — an environment. The difference is not just a buzzword, as everything from a burrito to a beer is supposedly "crafted" nowadays, but a more thoughtful approach to living.

"It's quite a provocative title," says Adam Rogers, Thos. Moser's director of design and product development, who heads the panel. "It's certainly based on Moser's approach to making and designing furniture. It's about basic ideals and identifying those principles in design. My perspective is that simplicity in general is at the base of good design. In my case, in my work, that's simplicity of form."

Simplicity sounds simple, but simplicity, as evinced by Japanese design culture, takes immense self-discipline. As covetous creatures, humans are wont to like-want-buy with very little thought in the process. Homes become stuffed and lives stifled: "Simplicity is an art. Identifying a few objects that speak to you, things of value and meaning that establish a certain feel or vision, is key," advises Rogers.

It's the opposite of the disposable culture that grew from 1950s mass consumerism. Before that, household items were handmade and valued, passed on through generations.

"Interestingly, these are values understood by the millennial generation," Rogers says. "They will pay more for a pair of shoes that are well made or a table that is handcrafted. Like our design principles, it's a process of careful selection instead of being inundated with superfluous materials."

Botox helps asthma sufferers

Location of study: Australia
Study subjects: 11 patients with treatment-resistant asthma and abnormal vocal cord movement
Results: Study participants received a total of 24 unilateral vocal cord injections of Botox, which caused temporary muscle paralysis. Subject response was then assessed using asthma control test scores and CT imaging of the vocal cords. The study found that Botox injected to one vocal cord resulted in improved asthma control and reduced narrowing of the upper airway.
Significance: For many asthma patients, vocal cord dysfunction is a debilitating condition that causes difficulty breathing and muscle spasms. Botox injections could represent a major step forward in treatment.

More women than men at risk for obesity-fueled depression

Location of study: India
Study subjects: Almost 2,000 obese adults
Results: It's well established that obesity leads to a host of physical health issues. But what role does obesity play when it comes to mental health? A recent Indian study found that obese women are more likely to develop depression when compared to obese men.
Significance: While obese men were two times as likely to be depressed as men who were not obese, the numbers were much different among women. In fact, obese women were found to be 39 times more likely to suffer from depression when compared to women of normal weight.

Saturated fats not as bad as we think?

Location of study: World-wide
Study subjects: Participants from 27 clinical trials and 49 population studies
Results: A report in the Annals of Internal Medicine is questioning the fact that saturated fats are deleteri-ous. The report says that comprehensive research hasn't found any evidence to clearly support the current cardiovascular guidelines, which encourage a low con-sumption of saturated fats.
Significance: Saturated fat may have more of a neutral-izing effect when it comes to heart disease. An NPR report says it's actually been shown to up good cholesterol and lower triglycerides when compared to carbohydrates.

Sore throat, neck mass among first symptoms of throat cancer

Location of study: U.S.
Study subjects: 88 people with oropharyngeal cancer
Results: Researchers from the Head and Neck Cancer Alliance found sore throat and neck mass to be the most common initial symptoms of a rapidly increasing type of oral, head and neck cancer known as oropharyngeal squamous cell carcinoma (OPSCC). Researchers say that HPV (human papillomavirus) is largely responsible for the increase in cases.
Significance: Researchers say that many nationally used textbooks and products used by medical and dental students do not include throat cancer as a possible finding in someone with a sore throat. Making physicians and dentists aware that oropharyngeal cancers are linked to sore throat or a lump in the neck could potentially lead to earlier diagnosis and treatment. The Head and Neck Cancer Alliance recommends that anyone with a lump in the neck or a sore throat for more than two weeks seek out a specialist.

Buying cheap is a US hobby

Re: 'Hobby Lobby should be consistent' (Metro, March 25) What's a merchant to do? The reason that retailers such as Hobby Lobby sell "Made in China" merchandise is that we Americans buy it! Given the choice between a domestic item and a comparable, lower-priced, "Made in China" item, Americans choose the lower price. Who supports the "bad guys"? Look in the mirror.

Print less, save the world

Carbon emissions have been the buzzwords now for years, but until very recently, very little has happened. Companies use more energy and have a larger carbon footprint than many households put together. We need to lower the footprint of the human race as a whole. This means that we have to start with the biggest culprits. If we don't do something soon, it will simply be too late. We need you to help. Never print an email unless it's completely crucial. It starts with your desk, spreads to your office, spills to the company, then changes the world. One person can make a difference.

KERRY STEVENS, VIA EMAIL

History is hard to predict

Re: 'Reagan raised GDP spending, then razed USSR' (Metro, March 24) Spending more on the military may have weakened the Soviet economy, but I would have expected it to make the government more, not less, able to suppress revolts. What happened is an example of the difficulty of predicting political events, a difficulty that is not new. In 1859, poet John Greenleaf Whittier predicted in a letter that no one then living would see the end of slavery in the United States, and in 1865, he wrote a poem celebrating the fact that slavery had been outlawed.

C's Sullinger pulling for Heat center Oden

NBA. Jared Sullinger is excited that fellow Ohio State product, Greg Oden, is getting his career on track.

Jared Sullinger was sitting about 5 feet from one of the televisions in the Celtics locker room with a smile on his face. He was checking out Miami Heat game footage, focused on one particular player on the court: Greg Oden.

Oden is making his NBA comeback after knee issues have plagued his career from the start. Drafted No. 1 overall in the 2007 NBA Draft, Oden has only played in 103 career games. Regardless, the big man is now contributing on an NBA team looking to three-peat this season. Sullinger sees the improvement in his fellow Ohio State alum.

"I'm excited for him, honestly," Sullinger said. "Greg went through a lot, he went through a lot of struggles but now he's back and slowly but surely he's making plays that I've seen him make at Ohio State. So I'm happy for the guy, honestly. And the Sullinger family is big supporters of Greg. We love Greg and everything he does at Ohio State. We love him for what he did at Portland. We just want him to do extremely well."

The feeling seems mutual for Oden, who like the rest of the NBA world, has seen Sullinger really step his game up this season in Boston.

"He's getting it done," Oden said. "No matter how you like his game, he's still getting it done. He's averaging some really good numbers, and I'm happy for him."

Oden was out of Ohio State well before Sullinger arrived, but the two share a bond, both having been dominant big men at the school during their time there. Oden now lives in Columbus, Ohio, the same place Sullinger grew up.

"He's a couple years younger than me, but we've been cool," Oden said of Sullinger.

Oden told us that he had a couple of meetings with the Celtics when he was a free agent, but it just didn't work out at the time.

"I would love playing with Greg," Sullinger said, also stating that his former coach at Ohio State, Thad Matta, would love it more than anybody.

Remy case

Agreement in custody of Remy child reached

A custody agreement was reached Tuesday for the 5-year-old granddaughter of Red Sox TV analyst Jerry Remy. The family of the late Jennifer Martel will receive guardianship of Arianna Remy. Jerry Remy and his wife, Phoebe, had been seeking custody of Arianna.

Remy's 35-year-old son, Jared, is currently being held without bail as he awaits trial for the murder of his former girlfriend, Martel, who was brutally stabbed to death last August.

Jerry and Phoebe Remy will have visitation rights, according to The Boston Globe. METRO

Lucic calls out Emelin

Bruins forward Milan Lucic went after Montreal's Alexei Emelin, verbally, after Emelin hit Lucic with a hip-check and backed down to B's captain Zdeno Chara when Chara took exception to the hit in Monday's B's loss. "It just shows how big of a chicken he is that he needs to go down [low] like that to take me down," Lucic said.
